

THEATRE

Side by side seating in rows, facing the front of the room, a good option for a presentation or product launch. Can be difficult for delegates to take notes as there are no tables

CABARET

Individual round tables with guests facing the front of the room, perfect for viewing a live event or presentation and for discussions.

BANQUET

Individual round tables with all guests facing inwards, usually chosen for dining as it is the most sociable option. Not ideal for events where attention is required to the front of the room

CLASSROOM

Rectangular tables with chairs on one side of the table only facing forwards, benefits note taking for training sessions and lectures. Seating capacity is drastically reduced from a theatre-style layout and delegates can only chat to one or two neighbours.

BOARDROOM

One large rectangular or oval table with delegates seated around all sides, perfect for a more intimate team meeting or debate

U-SHAPE

Rectangular tables set a U shape, leaving an area of open space at one end and in the centre, great for delegates to interact and to take notes

OPEN SQUARE

Similar to U-Shape, but without the open end, a great format for large-scale group interaction. The enclosed nature makes it difficult to have a presentation or display
